Thy Will Be Done

BY: HARVEY D. | NEW YORK

I WAS "given" AA in Tampa, Florida in the early 1940s and, while I admitted then that I was an alcoholic, I would not accept the fact.

It took over ten years of beating my head against the wall before I had softened it enough to allow AA to enter. How grateful I am now that I kept returning to meetings though I must have had a hundred slips.

Not once was I ever looked down upon by the members of my group and I was always received back with a warm welcome. I know now how disappointed they must have been and how they wished they could help me.

I do wish that I had been able to grab hold of the program ten years ago, and thus saved myself and my family years of heartaches; but through AA teachings I have learned to accept the things I cannot change, and I am firmly convinced that it was His will that I wait.

One of the first things I was told was that while I might think I have a hundred problems, I have only one problem to be solved. If I can solve that one--alcohol--the others will disappear. That, as well as everything else I have been told has turned out to be true and I only found that out by keeping an open mind.

I have also learned that God will only help me if I will help Him and as a result we have solved a lot of problems that were about one tenth the size I imagined them to he.

I have learned without realizing it to ask for God's will and not mine to be done, with the result that I am able to write this article--much to the amazement of two surgeons and my own physician.

On September 12th of last year I was wheeled into the operating room, not realizing that for the next seven hours I would be under the knife. My last recollection was asking for His will to be done. I had caught myself at first saying, "Please dear God pull me through this operation"--I immediately realized that I was going back to my alcoholic way of thinking in asking that, "My will be done."

About two weeks after the operation the chief surgeon came in to see me and said: "You have a strong heart, good health and the will to live to thank for coming out of this."

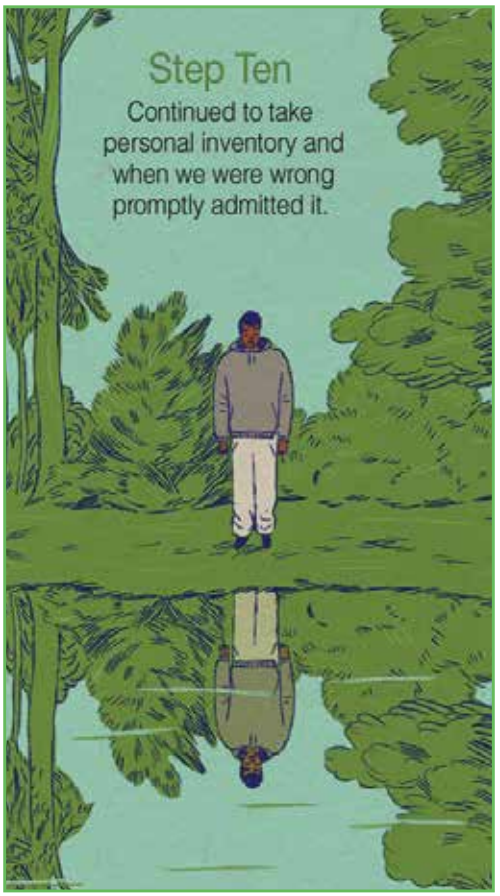

I answered him in all sincerity: "You are wrong, doctor. I have AA to thank for the good health and the strong heart, as my physical condition two years ago would never have pulled me through. And as for my 'will,' you are wrong again. It was the will of God that carried me safely through the operation."

After thinking over what I had said he admitted that I was entirely right, and even borrowed the book Twelve Steps and Twelve Traditions that I had on the table next to my bed.

Thanks to AA I am now well back on my feet, active again in Twelfth Step work, and feel honored and grateful at being given the opportunity to serve our group whose members helped me so much, as chairman for the next six months.

With His help and the help of all my friends I hope to be able to fulfill my responsibilities.

As we work the first nine Steps, we prepare ourselves for the adventure of a new life. But when we approach Step ten we commence to put our A.A. way of living to practical use, day by day in fair weather or foul.

CONCEPT TEN

Every service responsibility should be matched by an equal service authority— the scope of such authority to be always well defined whether by tradition, by resolution, by specific job description or by appropriate charters and bylaws.

TRADITION TEN — Long Form

No A.A. group or member should ever, in such a way as to implicate A.A., express any opinion on outside controversial issues— particularly those of politics, alcohol reform, or sectarian religion. The Alcoholics Anonymous groups oppose no one. Concerning such matters they can express no views whatever.

Thy Will, Not Mine

BY: C. C. | ARLINGTON, VIRGINIA

Her father's death taught her the true meaning of acceptance

FOUR WORDS have kept coming into my mind ever since I lost my father, a few short days ago. "Shall we dance, Daddy?" That's what I often used to say to my alcoholic father to get him to bed. I couldn't carry him, and he couldn't walk. So we danced--or, at least, it resembled dancing--down the hall to the bedroom, where he would fall across the bed and pass out.

I guess everyone in our family knew that sooner or later Daddy was going to die as a result of his drinking--but knowing and accepting the reality and finality of it are not easy.

When I came into AA, many people told me, "'Easy Does It.'" I have finally realized just what that slogan means. I had been trying to learn it all too fast. Take it day by day and don't project--that makes sense now. I realize that I was projecting the future of my own sobriety. I've finally admitted that I had a dream of twelfth-stepping my dad. When he died after my being sober only three months, I felt cheated, and I despaired at my loss. The program had given me hope that one day my dad would be sober. I had heard so many say, "Where there is life, there is hope for the drinking alcoholic." And Daddy had been in AA. I had such hope.

When I got the call that he had suffered a brain hemorrhage and was dying, I felt numb. I remember getting in my car and driving to an open AA meeting, screaming, "No, no, God! Please, no!" I was praying for a miracle. I could hardly see the road for the tears of despair that ran down my face. When I arrived at the meeting, I found the discussion was of the first three Steps. And the turmoil I felt began to subside as I listened. Finally, I admitted my powerlessness with the words "Thy will, God, not mine, be done." I repeated those words all night and into the next morning. I could feel despair, hurt, and aloneness creeping in, and still I prayed that God would help me carry the burden of my heavy feelings.

I was with my dad in the hospital just a few hours before he died. I was allowed only twenty minutes--I will never forget them. He was battered and bruised from falling down in the previous weeks, and--at fifty-four--he seemed so gray and so tired and so old. I loved him dearly. I held his hand, and he looked at me and said, "I'm afraid." I felt so helpless standing there in that hospital room with a man who had given me love as well as the horror of alcoholism. I, too, was afraid--afraid to let go of his hand, afraid to leave, afraid to say goodbye, and yet afraid to stay, afraid he might see my tears and my own fear of losing him.

And so he died, and in death, he was afraid. I was helpless to comfort him or to remove his fears. All I could say was "Daddy, don't you think it's about time you learned to let go and let God?" I'll never know whether or not he did, but I know that, for my own sobriety, I must. For the first time, I really have taken the First Step--not just with my own alcoholism, but with my dad's and my family's, too. I'm finally learning that I can do nothing about another alcoholic's drinking--except to share what I've learned in the Fellowship and pray that when I share my own story, some other alcoholic may relate and find hope and some day achieve sobriety. I'm also learning the true meaning of acceptance and letting go and letting God. In losing my dad to the disease of alcoholism and accepting this loss as the will of God, I have admitted my hurt--and been made once again a vulnerable human being.

To have loved so much and to lose so tragically--with this experience, I am finally opening a door to my feelings that has been closed for a very long time, and I am allowing my loved ones in. I am no longer afraid to love and to be loved. I am no longer afraid of being hurt because of love. I know God will never give me more than I can bear. He proved this much to me these last few days, and I am stronger for it.

My eyes are beginning to open finally upon a whole new life--a sober life. And I am changing. I'm finally seeing my character defects in the light of sobriety, and I know I don't have to be like that any more. I can change--with the help of my God and AA.

No, I'm not cured yet. I never will be. But I am sober. I'm climbing back on that pink cloud I fell off a few days ago, and I'm realizing how wonderful, how truly beautiful it is to be a sober alcoholic.

NOVEMBER 2025 | EARLY DAYS OF AA | EMOTIONAL SOBRIETY

What Will Be Will Be

BY: JILL S. | ASHEVILLE, NORTH CAROLINA

As dangerous flood waters surrounded her, she used everything she learned in AA to find peace

Last year on September 26, we had a long, sleepless night of howling winds, groaning branches and wild rains pelting against our windows and house. I live in Ashville, North Carolina. About 2:30 a.m., our power went out. Twice after that great thundering crashes shook our house as old trees landed on the roof. But the strangest sound was the unearthly roar of the Swannanoa River raging outside.

When I looked outside, I could hardly process what I saw. Our gentle little river—where children tubed and where you could walk across waist-deep on hot summer days—was now more expansive than the largest river in Asheville.

My neighbor's house, yard and cars were gone. I looked down the road as far as I could see and the river had devoured the entire cul-de-sac, the houses and the road on which they'd been built.

It was incomprehensible destruction, but the rain kept pounding and the river raged on, faster and faster, swelling and exploding as it traveled past me.

I was afraid. Somehow I had to get out of there. Why didn't I leave the previous night? Everyone else had had the sense to evacuate. I had taken too long, I scolded myself, beginning to feel the edges of hysteria. My heart was pounding. My breath came quick and shallow. I thought that if I could get myself up to the state road, then I would be OK, but about 50 yards into my escape, I knew I wouldn't make it. The river was rising too fast and the road flooding too quickly.

As I sloshed back toward the house, I thought I might be able to climb up the steep hill behind it, go through the woods and make it to higher ground, but I found the mountain was now a series of little waterfalls racing down the steep, wooded hill, gushing around my house. There was no way to make it out. For better or worse, I was there until it was over.

I just surrendered. Whatever was to be, it would be. In that moment, I became aware of a profound stillness and peace. Every trace of fear and anxiety vanished. Those emotions could not possibly exist in the conscious awareness of what I was experiencing.

"What is this," I asked out loud. "Is this God? Are there angels here? Is this what it means to be sober and awake?" It didn't matter what it was exactly, nor did it need to be defined. I felt held in grace. In love. In the peace of that spirit.

Around 9:30 a.m. the rain stopped. I stepped outside onto my deck to see this strange new world. Only a few houses were left on the east side of Riverbend. The road was completely gone. Now the road was part of the ravenous, racing river. Standing there watching the river come ever closer, moving faster and wilder by the minute, I somehow felt nothing but love for all of it. I was beholding the power of nature. She was dangerous and potent, glorious and magnificent. I felt like the most privileged person in the world to bear witness to this. It seemed a great secret was being revealed, and I was part of it: the river, the wind, the trees, all of it, all of us, interconnected. I felt no fear as the river rose, covering my yard, my car, now moving up the steps. I wondered how long my house would stand.

I spent the next three days surrounded by that river with no electrical power, no water, no phone service and no idea if anyone even knew what had happened on Riverbend Drive. Not once did that peace and sense of bliss leave me. Amazingly, I slept better than I'd slept in months. I felt no fear of death or drowning. Whatever was to be, it would be God's will. I felt grateful for my fantastic, adventurous, sober life and all the love I had shared.

That day I truly felt the Ninth Step Promise. "We will comprehend the word serenity and know peace." I was also reminded of this beautiful line in our Third Step Prayer, "Take away my difficulties, that victory over them may bear witness to those I would help of thy love, thy power and thy way of life."
